

Survey Shows How Employers Hire, Recruit

A recent survey of nearly 700 human resource managers explored organizational practices related to finding and hiring qualified employees with disabilities. The survey findings showed that nearly half of respondents said their organization actively recruits people with disabilities and 57 percent say they work with community organizations that promote the employment of people with disabilities.

The survey was developed as part of a collaboration between Cornell University, Employment and Disability Institute, and the Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM).

Find out more about what business are doing to find and hire employees with disabilities and what they feel is most effective.

Click here to unsubscribe from future newsletters and announcements

Not a subscriber? Click here to subscribe to the EARN newsletter