

Conference Highlights Employer Practices

This week on the EARN|Exchange, Susanne Bruyere, director of the Employment and Disability Institute (EDI) at Cornell University's ILR School, blogs about "Innovative Research on Employer Practices: Improving Employment for People with Disabilities," a state of the science conference on Oct. 22-23 in Washington, D.C. Cornell University researchers will present their findings on employer practices and their role in increasing the rate and quality of employment for people with disabilities, and discuss critical issues such as institutional barriers to employment, with commentary from public and private sector stakeholders. Patricia Shiu, director of the Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs (OFCCP) will be the keynote speaker on Day 1. Registration is free.
